Female talent development

In 2017 SEEK concluded the pilot of the FAST (Females at SEEK Thrive) program which launched in 2015. This program was designed to encourage women to progress their careers at SEEK and consider any potential career development barriers for them as individuals.

The ultimate aim of the program was to increase female participation in senior roles and provide important learnings for SEEK about how to achieve greater gender balance at all levels across the organisation. A key focus of the program was to improve awareness of unconscious bias and its impact on career pathways for women employed at SEEK.

The program included:

CEO Mentoring and exposure in small groups

Executive Sponsorship and Coaching Circles, provided targeted education and development

Working on a project with a sponsor to come up with recommendations for ideas and solutions to effect sustainable change, aimed at improving gender diversity at SEEK

There were 16 female participants in the program and SEEK has already seen an impact in terms of career velocity. Since commencement, 30% of the FAST participants have experienced role growth, either through promotion or expansion in the scope of their current role.

Due to the success of this program it will now become a permanent fixture and we are currently looking at how the lessons from this program could be applied to support others in career progression at SEEK.

Unconscious bias and inclusive leadership

In May 2016 all Executives and Senior Managers attended Unconscious Bias training run by an external partner, as part of creating an even more inclusive workplace at SEEK. A sub group of advocates and influencers were created and networked to embed the learnings throughout their teams and our workplace. These leaders were identified as change champions and asked to reflect on points in decision making which are vulnerable to bias, such as recruitment, performance conversations, development or promotion in teams, reward and recognition and opportunities through allocation of work such as special projects.

We also continue to run quarterly EMPOWER sessions for all staff, which profile women role models who are willing to share their insights and personal stories about how they succeeded in growing their careers. These sessions have featured both internal and external speakers and have proved very popular for all employees with strong attendance rates.

STEM: Long term investment in school level digital talent

In September 2016 SEEK hosted the second annual Camp SEEK, a technology immersion program for girls in Year 9 & 10 who spent four days learning about different aspects of the digital industry. The aim of Camp SEEK is to bridge the gender gap by introducing young women to the creative world of digital and to encourage them to consider a career in STEM (science, technology, engineering and mathematics). Feedback from both these programs has been extremely positive, with four of last year's participants sharing that their experience at Camp SEEK specifically influenced their decision on selection of subjects to support future tertiary education related to STEM.

The Camp SEEK alumni group will continue to receive communication and updates from SEEK, to develop a connection and foster SEEK being viewed as the employer of choice for young women wanting to pursue a digital career.

Now that we have experience in successfully hosting Camp SEEK over 2 years, we are looking to expand this event in 2017, to have a larger impact on young women in secondary schools and to support gender equity in the technology industry.

Acquisition of female talent

As part of our commitment to achieve gender balance, a focused recruitment effort was introduced to ensure there is female representation on every candidate shortlist and interview panel when recruiting externally for SEEK. With this attention and focus we have achieved an 84% representation of women on our interview panels. We aim to have 100% representation on interview panels, as there is clear evidence that this will improve gender balance in hiring outcomes.

Gender neutral advertising

One initiative deployed this year was a trial of gender neutralising technology for our internal and external job adds for roles at SEEK. This has involved all our technology and digital job ads being scrutinised for any gender bias, which may exclude or discourage women from applying. This has led to some interesting observations and learnings for our Recruitment team and Hiring Managers, and required adjustments or wording changes in several cases. The software is something which has both internal application for SEEK and potential use for the external products and solutions offered to hirers and candidates.

Return from parental leave

In 2016 the Inclusion Council developed a 'Leave of Absence' toolkit which provides Managers with the tools necessary to support their team members with a flexible and rewarding experience, when returning to work from parental leave.

Every primary parent (both male and female) is offered a series of coaching sessions with a specialist coach to support the transition both into parenthood and back into the workplace.

Flexibility of roles

We advertise that all roles at SEEK can be undertaken flexibly. Flexibility can mean different things for different people and can include hours of work, locations of work and patterns of work including: part-time work, working from home, job share and flexible starting and finish times. We continue to help people have fulfilling and productive working lives through an internal push to see more job flexibility. Managers are actively encouraged to consider flexible arrangements.
